

The Investigator

A new partnership and new projects to come

We are happy to announce that the I am, I'll be study will continue thanks to a new partnership with different ministries, organizations and university researchers. Your contribution is essential, and we are counting on your participation in the next data collection. Stay tuned!

Thank you from the I am, I'll be team!

For over 28 years, your invaluable input has allowed us to advance research and to better understand the reality of young people so as to better focus the programs and services aimed at them.

Thanks to you, many documents have been published and are available on the study website. The most recent publication was released on June 12 and looks at the links between school climate in high school and access to college education.

Additional research is underway about topics such as college graduation, work, and physical activity.

vm / iStock

New email address?

You have a new email address? Let us know by writing to us at iam_illbe@stat.gouv.qc.ca.

Moving soon?

Fill out the online form available on the homepage of the study website.